Hello everyone!

No RTF attachment again this time, just a news release that we have a new FAQ file posted on our website. There's lots more information now, so go get yourself a fresh copy of the new info or go get it for the first time if you've never seen it before. We've also now put it in PDF format, which is a universal format that any computer equipment can read with the Adobe Acrobat software that's become the standard for online viewing. There's very simple instructions posted for how to read it online and how to download it if you want to keep a copy. There's also a link to get the free Adobe software if you don't have it on your machine, but if you've been on the 'net for a while you very likely already have it.

I would have attached the info here, but that assumes that everyone wants one and wants to take the bandwidth hit of a larger message. I chose not to do that to everyone, so you'll have to go to the site and get a copy if you want it. As always, if you find a mistake or significant omission in the FAQ, be sure to let me know so we can fix it next time.
